The racing at Morris Park yesterday had a deeidedly sensational ending. There were four starters for the handleap at one mile, with the Oneck Stable's game little six-year-old Sir Wal-ter favorite at 7 to 5, the three-year-old Bason second choice at 8 to 5, the four-year-old Volley third favorite at 3 to 1, and the threeyear-old Savarin at 12 to 1 the outsider in the eculation. After a superb struggle through he final furlong Volley got up in time to make a dead heat with Sir Walter, and as Bastion was only a short head away there was the wildest sort of excitement over the finish. W. C. Daly, who owns Volley, clamored to run the race off, but W. C. Rollins, who trains Sir Walter, would not listen to this and was anxious for a division of the takes. Daly clamored all the louder at this and inally Rollins refused point blank to run Sir Walter again. This was a hardship to the backm of the favorite, but there is nothing in the rules of racing as at present drawn to compel an per or trainer to send a horse to the post uner such circumstances and the stewards awardof first money to Volley. The Jockey Club takes no cognizance of betting, but the backers of Voley got their money nevertheless, wagers following the decision of the governing body of the turf. Naturally those who had played Sir Wal-ter were ill-humored, while the supporters of Volley were correspondingly jubilant.

It will be remembered that there was a parallel case last year at Sheepshead Bay when the Western colt Burlesque and M. F. Dwyer's filly akes. C. T. Patterson, the owner of Burlesque, received the money. Formerly it was compulsory to run a race over if the owners could not agree upon a division, and one of the most notable intances was in the case of Banquet and Ramapo at Coney Island three years ago.

The feature of the racing yesterday from a

takes for three-year-olds, at one mile. Octagon and Buddha, two of the best of the year at their age, were eligible, but neither put in an appearance. John E. McDonaid's home-bred colt, Renseclaer, by Hayden Edwards, out of The Belle, by imported Rayon d'Or, was favorite and an easy winner. Set Fast and Arabian were about the only other starters which had material support, a few persons taking an outside chance as Concord and Fireside. Doggett rode Renselaer, and the race was never in doubt, the handsome colt striding to the front on the upper turn and simply smothering his field in the homestretch. Arabian did not bleed yesterday, and fet Fast was no match for the son of Galore in the final furiong. Rensselaer has all the marks of a high-class race horse. Kebo, with 126 pounds 19, was prominent during the first six furiongs. Dolando, the favorite, took the opening dash at seven furiongs in race-horse style, disposing of Kalser Ludwig in the stretch in summary fashion. Sue Kittle and Sir Vassar, both of which made up a lot of ground, were third and fourth respectively. The old-time sprinter Nick and the four-year-old Bonaparte carried the bulk of the money in the second race over the Eclipse course. Billali and Nick objected to the barrier of the starting machine, and the race was started with the flag. Bonaparte, off last, was never in the hunt, but Nick, Cleophus, and Billali ran lapped for nearly five furlongs. The latter, at long odds, then drew away and won hands down. Hanwell finished strong and beat Cleophus for second money. The Thompson filly Sagacity won the race for two-year-old fillies and geldings without trouble, she and her stable companion, Colonial Dame, soid favorites, coupled, at 3 to 1, Storm Queen ranking next in favor at 3'y to 1. Sloan kept the half-sister to Stonenell in the van from start to finish, and was sitting still at the wire. Juda was second, while Kilt best Abundant a head for third money. The hitherto unbeaten filly, Claret Cup, was prominent for half a mile, and then gave it up. Arthur White's colossal colt on Deck, by Whi re, were eligible, but neither put in an appear sace. John E. McDonald's home-bred colt, British Board of Agriculture. The report that the British Board of Agri-culture has placed restrictions upon the importation of dogs from American ports into Great Britain after next September created a furore at the quarterly meeting of the American Kennel Club, held yesterday afternoon at 55 Liberty street. Representatives of fourteen clubs which are members of the A. K. C. were present. They

August Belmont, President of the club, was absent. Vice-President Edward Brooks acted as Chairman. It was the unanimous opinion of those present that thousands of lovers of dogs would be put to great inconvenience. would be put to great inconvenience and ex-pense by the order of the British board. James Watson introduced the subject, and offered the following preamble and resolution:

Watson introduced the subject, and offered the following preamble and resolution:

Whereas, it is reported in the public press that the British Board of Agriculture has issued orders restricting the importation of dogs from America, based upon the idea that rables is prevalent here; and Whereas, it is well known to those most closely connected with dogs as owners and breeders that rables is practically unknown in this country, and that alleged cases of hydrophobia arising from the bites of dogs claimed to te rable arising from the bites of dogs claimed to te rable are in early every case published for sensational purposes, and with no knowledge of the actual condition of the dog, and the alleged cure of such persons is therefore purely imaginary and mercenary; be it therefore purely imaginary and mercenary; be it therefore.

Resolved, That a special committee be appointed by this club, whose duty it shall be to obtain information of a reliable nature regarding the existence of rables in the United States, by communicating with dog owners throughout the country, and by such further steps as it may deem necessary.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

tor owners throughout the country, and by such further steps as it may deem necessary.

The resolution was unanimously adopted. Chairman Brooks said that he would, within a short time, appoint a committee to carry out this provision. He further said that he would select two members of the A. K. C. and three veterinary surgeons who are well-known experts. The committee's report will be made at the next quarterly meeting.

The members understood that the steamer Majestic, which sailed yeaterday from Liverpool to New York, has on board copies of the order, which would be posted throughout the United States. The provisions of the order, according to the members, are entirely too stringent and most extraordinary in their nature. Before a dog can enter Great Britain after the 1st of September, a special idense will have to be procured from the Board of Agriculture, only after going through many formalities. Details for the identification of the dog must be given, the address of the owner, where the animal is going to land, the route by which it is to travel, &c. In case of any violation of the provisions of the order the dog will be liable to six months' quarantine at the expense of the owner.

In addition to the great number of dogs which are taken to Great Britain for exhibition at dog shows, all American tourists who travel in that country and wish to take their dogs with them will be required to go through these formalities or leave their dogs at home.

AN AMATEUR GOLF KING.

HILTON LEADS THE FIELD IN THE OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP AT HOYLAKE.

His Second Victory in the Great Svent of the Links—A Member of the Royal Liverpoot Club—Braid, the Romford Professional, Only Section by a Stroke—Tait's Poor Slome Hote. HOYLARE, May 20.-Harold Hilton of the toyal Liverpool Golf Club won the open championship to-day with a score of 314. This was grand scoring, and there was great rejoicing at the victory of a local amateur. Braid, who made gallant attempt to tie at the home hole, finished in 315. Pulford was 316, Tait 317. At the end of the third round Braid led with 236, with Tait, who took seven for the home hole, Pulford and Herd next at 238; Hilton, 239, and Vardon and Brown, 241. There was much excitement among the throng of onlookers when Hilton came in with 75 in the fourth round.

It is Hilton's second victory in the open championship. His previous success was at Muir-field in 1892, the first year the championship was extended to seventy-two holes, when his score was 305. Hilton was born at West Kirby, near Hoylake, in 1869. From 1879 to 1883, both years inclusive, he won the medal at golf for boys under 15 years. He joined the Royal Liverpool Club in 1887, and has since been one of the oremost figures in the golfing events of Great Britain. Hilton is very short in stature, about 5 feet 5 inches tail, yet has a very easy and graceful style. He excels in the iron shots, and when he won the open championship before, besides laying many shots dead, on two or three occasions he holed the ball outright with short pitches from the edge of the green. Hilton, it is said, never plays the cleek, using the brassey invariably in its stead. When the open championship is won by an amateur he takes the value of the prize in plate. John Ball, Jr., also of the Royal Liverpool Club, winner in 1890 at Prestwick, is the only other amateur to win in the open championship. It is the sixth time the first place has been gained by an English golfer since the event championship at Muirfield, Hilton was beaten in the fourth round by Robert Maxwell, by 6 up

ON THE KNOLLWOOD LINKS. some Fine Play on the Second Day of the Open

Two of the most expert of the younger set of golfers, Van Etten and Larocque, had a try at Fenn yesterday, in the opening match play rounds for the Whitehouse Cup in the Knollwood Country Club spring tourney, but neither could lower the colors of the Palmetto cham-pion. This morning Fenn meets Bowers, who, should he show the form displayed in some of his recent matches at St. Andrew's, may have a chance to win. The others left in for the sem final round are Robbins and Herbert M. Harrian, who qualified by beating Menzies in the keenest match of the day.

Fenn and Van Etten were the first pair to start. They were all square at the sixth hole, after Fenn had landed in a bad lie on the bank of the ditch in his drive for the fourth hole, making it a losing one in eight to Van Etten's six. Van Etten missed a four-foot put to halve the seventh hole, and after that it was Fenn's had the better of the bye holes.

Bowers was pitted against Reynal. The young Knollwood golfer was beaten by three up, but he strong game. Armstrong was three up on La-rocque at the sixth hole, and still one up at the ninth. The Staten Islander was beginning to ninth. The Staten Islander was beginning to figure on an easy victory, but afterward Larocque did the calculating. They were all even at the tenth hole, and, after halving the fifteenth and sixteenth holes, Larocque was dormie two. A long put won the seventeenth hole for Arinstrong, but as the home hole was halved in three in pretty style the Staten Islander was beaten. The four made their rounds in eightynine, which shows it was excellent golfing. The cards:

An unexpectedly close contest marked the match between Fenn and Larocque in the second round, and only for losing his ball on the seventeenth hole the Shinnecock player might have won. The cards:

Harriman and Menzies were so evenly matched that it was a seesaw struggle to get the lead throughout. It was fine golfing, with no bad holes. They were even at the seventeenth hole. Harriman won the home hole and the match in three, getting down by a long put. The cards show the even play:

Murrah for Spider Legal-Sinkers's Wife Will Get Her New Bleycle, When Sinkers Isn't Using It—Alleged Winnings of the Funeral Brigado Enough to Buy Houses With. Dolando, the racehorse named after Pat Dolan, uncle of Nephew Johnny Meehan of Park row restaurant fame, won the first race at Morris Park yesterday, and the Dolan funeral crowd hit the bookmakers so hard that the sinker man believes there'll be "ne more racehorseing in der

"Ye may be dough heads," he said last night, "but a man what don't vork-gets-hie-money-some-all-when a man what-hie-works also somehic-can get, even when he don't."

This was what they all thought last night, and they felt like telling it that way.

The tip that Dolando would win spread all over the lower portion of the city on Wednesday. The letter carriers "borrowed advances" on their salaries, the coppers got loans from their friends, and the bartenders and waiters along Park row scraped together what they could get along the line.

With the exception of the man who keeps the books in the little restaurant, Superintendent Petc, the entire funeral crowd went to the Morris Park track. When they got back to the Park row restaurant Pete, the superintendent, figured up their winnings, and made out this schedule.

The grandfather of Horatio King was George King of Raynham, Mass., and he and three of his brothers served in the war for independence. Like most of the country-reared young men of the period, Gen. King was brought up on the farm and had a personal knowledge of what life upon the farm is, or rather what it was at that time. He received such an education as the common schools afforded, and in the spring of 1829 entered the office of the Jefresonian, a paper then printed in Paris, to learn the printer's art. One year afterward he became part owner, and in six months thereafter sole owner, and, in 1832, editor of the paper. In May, 1833, he moved to Portland. On Jan. 1, 1838, he sold out to the Standard, and that paper was finally merged with the Eastern Argus. In March, 1839, he was appointed by Postmaster-General Amos Kendall to a place in the Post Office Department at Washington, where he had ever since resided. He received promotion from time to time until 1850, when he was connected with the foreign mail service, in which capacity he originated and perfected certain postal arrangements of great importance to the service.
